

TOCO TOUCAN

Although there are 33 species of toucans, the toco toucan is the most recognizable because of its large orange and black bill. The bill is hollow and light, but very strong. The toucan uses the tip of its bill and its long tongue to eat fruits, berries and insects. At home in the treetops, the toucan has two toes in front and two in back to give it a firm grasp on tree branches. This black and white bird is native to South America.
